

Men Are Obsolete

Contributed by Matt Katz
Thursday, 28 December 2006

I'm just hoping the museum exhibits about men are at least somewhat favorable.

Because dudes are done.

We've outlived our usefulness, purpose and relevancy, and soon enough we're going to go the way of the human appendix and the eight-track player.

And once we become extinct, I'm fearful women really aren't going to care. Sure, they may put up an exhibit at the natural history museum, or do a special on Lifetime.

But other than that, will they even notice? The only things we've ever been good for -- procreation, protection and making cash -- can now be done by women themselves.